

National Health Services Signs National Deal for WellnessSuite™

July 24, 2009

National Health Services has signed a deal to provide access to its newest Wellness Plan to a population of over 455,000 plan members through a Third Party Administration Services company that provides benefit programs to unions, municipalities, self-funded health plans and to mid-sized and to large employers nationally.

"Given the size of the population, with even a 30% participation rate, the company stands to earn revenues in excess of $3 million dollars in the first year. We expect participation to rise significantly in years 2 and 3," says Elizabeth Gannon, President National Health Services. "We are very excited, this being the first national client for new My Healthy Lifestyle(R) WellnessSuite(TM). More and more organizations are seeing the value of introducing wellness as a cost containment strategy." Gannon added "NHS is in discussions to supply several custom solutions for a variety of national clients. With the ease of implementation and modest pricing in this economy, NHS' Wellness Solutions are poised to be the wellness plans of choice for the mass market of small to mid-sized employers looking to for affordable effective wellness solutions giving NHS market share at a rapid pace."

According to an article published by the Boston Globe, Members of Congress have announced the introduction of health care legislation. A provision in the Senate bill would increase the insurance discount companies can offer to employees who take steps like losing weight. Workers who quit smoking, lose weight, and eat right could have their health insurance premiums cut by as much as half, possibly saving them thousands of dollars per year, under a measure inserted with little notice this week into the Senate health care overhaul bill.
